Progress in Human Rights is a victory for all human beings, the principles of universality and progressiveness are, without a doubt, the basis for the consolidation of respect for Human Dignity.

However, there are still areas in which we must work to consolidate equality among all human beings, as well as equity.

For this reason, we seek to recognise and vindicate the various struggles, from various angles, women have presented in terms of recognition and respect for their human rights.

The positions of gender equality are still valid and will probably continue to emerge more, so it is important to know where we are and where we are going. Modern societies cannot be considered appropriate if they do not have the material and substantive conditions for equality.
